You said she was perma'd but she's still streaming on youtube

Lilia has been streaming Stalcraft on youtube for over 12 hours straight now and I thought one of the mods/devs had already assured us in another thread that she had been perma'd after getting exposed using glow cheats on twitch previously.

So what's all this about? Just another couple day ban for cheating and now we are also dealing with lying on the forums?

Well considering the games F2P so a fresh steam account, and some IP changing will get around any ban sadly unless there is hardware bans that are harder to get around but can still be spoofed. The sad fact is all PvP games are a cat and mouse for cheating and anti cheat having the game F2P just makes it that much easier sadly.. There best bet and im no expert but it would be to encrypt the info on client side or something or require some sort of reg keys idk edit: skimming through this looks like he/she (idk) original account since there so much progress they just to out right perma ban he/she

We did indeed issue a perma ban and twitch even deleted their channel. This is just a new account and, as you can clearly see, they've stopped using modified game files, so at this moment we have no reason to ban them again.

Is ban evading allowed then.... I feel like this would be against the rules normally

No, this isn't their original account. This person just, I must admit, has decent mechanical skill and game knowledge so they are able to progress faster than most

Fair enough credit where credit is due and looking through EXBO terms of use theres nothing I can find on ban evading I feel like that should maybe be amended in the future
