

C05758701Original Document \(PDF\) »

Contributed by Anthony Pesce (Los Angeles Times)

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, June 5, 2009 6:12 PM
To: 'ntanden' [redacted]
Subject: Re: last email on this subject

Thanks for the running commentary. I hope the stars are aligned desp info flowing.

I will not be in DC June 20 for the BIG 10 year milestone, but congrats

----- Original Message -----

From: Neera Tanden [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Fri Jun 05 16:43:08 2009
Subject: last email on this subject

Sorry to flood your email, but I couldn't resist sending this to you from [redacted]

A year later, Hillary wins

A year ago today, the final set of primaries made official the foregone primary, and Hillary Clinton lost it.

There's far too much going on today to dwell on an anniversary, but it news in its light: On the central health care policy debate of the Demc within a fairly narrow frame -- Obama appears to have conceded toda Clinton's.

In a dense, careful letter <http://www.politico.com/static/PPM118_0
Max Baucus, Obama offered his principles <<http://www.politico.com/> plan and conceded on a central point: He is now open to an individual which is now being talked about by Senators of both parties with the Obama still backs a "hardship waiver" for people unable to afford the objection to the mandate. But what he cast as a principled difference people couldn't afford insurance? or something more? -- seems to ha

Here's the relevant paragraph:

I understand the Committees are moving towards a principle responsible for having health insurance coverage, and asking that em lapses and gaps in coverage that make us less healthy and drive up ev shared responsibility. But I believe if we are going to make people res make health care affordable. If we do end up with a system where pe

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-21