Great Replacement/White Genocide

- “Why is it then that we are forced to accept probably the most transformative policies in the history of our country, perhaps the most transformative policies that are possible, which is the systematic replacement of the people that constitute that country. We can't talk about it, we can't use mass media, we can't run for office, we can't change policy, so at a certain point what is the expectation? \(On the El Paso shooting\)

And the excesses of that would be real xenophobia, real hostility toward perceived or real outsiders. That if we had the restoration of a core American identity centred around ethnicity and race, well, we would tend to regard not-whites as outsiders and there might be backlash against them. To me, that's almost inevitable and you're basically right about that.”](#)

- "If antifa were marching down the streets and they were waving the banner of Benito Mussolini or Francisco Franco, I'd be joining them, frankly. If antifa was waving the banner of Falangism, if they were waving the banner of Franco, and they were saying 'Catholic fascism now,' I would join them. I would become a part of antifa. I would welcome antifa. Yes, take over the country. Storm D.C. Take over the capital. Raise the banner of Mussolini and Franco, and, you know, some notable others, right. Oswald Mosely, that would be a great thing."
- "Bolsonaro. We need something like that in America. Hopefully, he can show Trump how it's done. What's cool about him is that he has control of the military... You've got 55 percent of the vote and the military. You can do whatever you want. Screw the Congress... Maybe Trump can learn from that a little."
- "When he eventually took the stage, Fuentes swiped at the media for comparing Vladimir Putin to Adolf Hitler: "As if that isn't a good thing."
