Is the allegedly infringing work an exact copy of your entire work?

No

How do you believe the respondent accessed your work?

Other

The registered work had been previously posted by other users on the same online forum where respondent posted it.

What are the similarities between your work and the allegedly infringing work? When your case moves forward, you will need to show that your creative expression is substantially similar to the respondent's alleged infringement.

Respondent used the registered work, admitted to copying the work and admitted to using GenAI to make minor additions to the work. The copyright information of the original work is still visible in respondent's version.

Describe the allegedly infringing activities, or how the respondent used your work without permission.

Respondent created a derivative work from the original registered work without a license and distributed it without permission. Respondent admitted to and did use third-party AI platforms to alter the work. Doing so would have necessitated respondent distributing the original work without claimant's permission. Additionally, respondent appears to have used software to remove and attempt to remove the copyright designation present on the original work.

Are any of the respondents online service providers?

No

Describe how you were harmed as well as your request for monetary relief.

Claimant statement:

I have the exclusive right to control distribution and licensing of my image (subject to the usual fair use exemptions), I did not grant such a license, and would not have even if asked.

I am asking for statutory damages in the amount of $4,999.00.
